

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

American Messaging Services, LLC acquires Aquis Communications, Inc.

LEWISVILLE, TX – January 8, 2014 – American Messaging Services, LLC (“American Messaging”) is pleased to announce it has acquired the operating assets of Aquis Communications, Inc. (“Aquis”), a subsidiary of ComSoft Corporation.

The transaction brings together two of the most respected critical messaging companies in the United States. J. Roy Pottle, Chairman & Chief Executive Officer of American Messaging said “this transaction adds to our considerable presence in the eastern United States by adding over 60,000 subscribers and several very substantial customer relationships. The transaction also adds considerable network coverage in several states that will ultimately benefit existing and prospective customers alike.”

Richard Gdovic, President and CEO of ComServe Corporation said, “Customers should know there will be little to no change in service as our primary goal is to make certain the acquisition has minimal impact on service delivery. American Messaging has an excellent reputation and is known for its singular focus on service.”

From a technology perspective, American Messaging and its subsidiaries provide critical messaging services throughout the United States. Using proprietary and third party wireless messaging networks together with its suite of mobile and desktop applications it simultaneously delivers critical messages to pagers, smart phones, tablets and personal computers. It also constructs and operates dedicated messaging networks for individual customers that operate in conjunction with other third party networks, including its proprietary messaging networks, providing redundancy and more rapid message delivery. Message delivery and review is easily initiated, monitored and archived using the Company’s mobile and desktop applications or through customer supporting software that is included as part of its overall service offering. Pottle closed by saying “We look forward to introducing these services to Aquis customers.”
